Many facts were stated, in Illustration of the theme, which were new to his bearers. He disagreed with Professor Huxley in his views, which were not based on facts or logical reasoning. Professor Beers, he stated, had done more to impart correct views of the theory of life and the science of biology than any or all other modern philosophers. Like his first lecture, this was full of interest and anecdote, illustrated with frequent diagrams on the blackboard.

THE TREASURY OFFICE. - The appointment of Mr. Joseph O. Carter as Registrar of Public Accounts, will give general satisfaction. Probably no person in the kingdom is better qualified by education and experience to perform the duties of this responsible office than be. His appointment reflects credit or the Minister of Fivance and the Government, while it will assure all that the accounts of the national treasury will be faithfully kept, and its business honestly transacted.

[Correspondence of the Gazette.]

EDITOR GAZETTE: - The earnestness with which the matter of cortailing our national expenses is now considered, makes it important to discriminate with wise toresight between useless expenditures and those that are necessary and even remunerative. While our national debt is increasing and our population diminishing, greater economy in the administration of government is certainly necessary; but for similar reasons it is equally necessary to care for its sources of revenue. To economize, by neglecting these, would be to imitate a farmer who should cease, not only from unwise outlays, but also even from planting and protecting his crops. Such a course would bring our government to the condition of many of its Hawaiian subjects, with whom indebtedness seems chronic and constitutional.

Some legislation is evidently necessary for perpetuating our present resources; and something might well be done for opening new avenues of prosperity. Without more than merely alluding to the importance of thus protecting our national wealth in forests, and to the importance of promoting immigration and a supply of labor for the maintenance of our various industries, I would specially mention two matters illustrative of the importance of wisely discriminating be-

If this work is not complet-ed now, its expense must, and will be, borne by the government in the future, and that at a loss, for the large difference. However, it is only by fre- which we cannot estimate. When now the expense of procuring instruments for this work has been borne and a large and most successful beginning made, to immediately discontinue it, and o leave to future litigation the questions that will arise through its neglect, would be both unwise and criminal.

The second matter, of which I would speak, is the encouragement of agriculture, especially by the introduction of exotic plants. To show the propriety of the Government's being urged to render a little sesistance in this matter. I would allude to what is done in various ways by other countries for the promotion of agriculture. It is well known what was done in France for fostering the production of beet sugar and of silk and of other valuable commodities; and what a stimulus hus been given in other countries to agriculutilizing cotton, jute, and ramie, for the improve ment of live stock, for the importation of new grains, vegetables, and fruits, and for the invention of better agricultural implements. In the little island of Mauritius, which has about one sixth of the area of this group, the Government has established a special bureau for scientific agriculture; through which a magnificent park has been formed, filled with, innumerable exotic plants, with hundreds of species of ferns and lowering shrubs, and with trees, valuable for timber and fruit, from all parts of the tropics The Baobab of Africa, the Banyan of India, the Satinwood of San Domingo, the Cloves of the

There can be no doubt that a small outlay, properly made for these and other such objects, would best enable us to solve the problems how to diminish the national debt, for which we are proposing to anonomize, how to increase our population and account the such contracts.
